Railroads to-day resumed the consideration of the Vandevere bill for refunding the debt of the Pacific railroads to the Government. They got through with sixteen sections, which are substantially like the Outhwaite bill, and concern the Union Pacific also. The remainder of the bill opposes the refunding plan to meet the case of the Central Pacific Railroad, and, before entering upon its consider ation, the question arose as to whether the committee should report the bill as was done by the Senate committee, covering both, or as separate bills, but an adjournment was arrived at before decision was reached.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs to-day ordered a favorable report upon a bill to appropriate money to reimburge the States of California, Oregon and Nevada for expenses incurred to aid in the suppression of the rebellion. The amounts are: To California, $4,428,892; Oregon, $376,-272; Nevada, $100,907. Wherever a State paid interest on loans to meet these expenses, these amounts, after being determined, shall also be paid.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6 .- The remains of Colonel J. M. Donahue were placed in the family vault at Calvary Cemetery at noon to-day. The funeral services were held at St. Mary's Cathedral, but before the body was taken to the church it was viewed by great number of persons at the family residence on Bryant street.

About 9 o'clock the casket was removed to the hearse, and the cortege took up the line of march, with the Third Infantry Regiment in advance as a funeral escort. There was an immense throng of people at the cathedral. The interior of the church was draped in mourning, and floral offerings were numerous. Rev. Father Kenna celebrated requiem mass, and delivered a eulogy on the life and character of the deceased millionaire. At the close of the services the military formed in line again, and escorted the remains to the cemetery.

Besides the regular escort, there were a number of other companies present from Santa Rosa, Petaluma, Oakland, San Rafael and San Jose.

EDITION

Everything points to a bitter po-litical fight this fall throughout the State, and a word of advice to the manipulators may not be out of place. Nevada has had more to contend with in years gone by than any State in the Union; it has been plundered and maltreated by all our rich men until the juice of the lemon is about all gone, and what few people we have left are now thoroughly aroused to the importance of a new deal. They have seen the folly of bartering off their birthright for a few paltry dollars and do not propose to stand it any longer. Indications point to the possibility of the Louisiana Lottery Co. coming here and making the attempt to foist that concern upon the people, thereby making a gambling hell of the State for all time, and if they come they should be sat upon so hard that the lottery question would be forever ended. In order to successfully carry out this plan the "manipulators" will have to interest themselves in the project, and our advice is: Do not attempt it, for the people are not in a humor to be trifled with. Our further advice is to nominate men of character and standing to fill your offices, and do not attempt to put dissolute characters and tin-horn gamblers on your ticket; if you do, defeat is sure to follow. Discard all factions in local politics and nominate a ticket that will be acceptable to everybody, for it is high time that little bickerings and petty jealousies are thrust aside for something more noble. This faction or that should not be allowed to rule or ruin any longer, but should be made to realize that they are only a part of the commonwealth, and have no right to dictate any more than any one else. Let Republicans all work to gether for a good government and the honest success of the party, and we will be respected at home and abroad, and, in a measure, at least, remove the stigma that has so long been nauseating to all right thinking people. Let the Democracy do the same thing, and, po matter which side wins, we will at least have a pure government. Select men for the Legislature that you would be willing to trust with your own business. Do not give any one a seat that wants it for what he can "make," but send your very best men. In short, give us a new deal all round, and raise the State in

THE strike of the iron-molders in San Francisco is a sad mistake for it may result in depriving California of the results of the prosecution of a great industry. The strike as a remedy is a mistake, Mr. Powderly, who has so long had the confidence of the wage-earners of the trades, has been even more emphatic than this in his denunciation of the strike, and he speaks from the volume of experience. The position of the employers is a very simple one. They say that they are thrown into competition with Eastern manufacturers, whose maximum payment of wages is the minimum on this coast, The Record - Union says: It is not proposed to reduce wages here to that standard, but to make such an adjustment as will leave the maximum here much higher than that of the East, and that will save to this coast the iron manufacturing industries. If this cannot be done, they declare that they will have their castings made at the East. Assuming this to be the true situation, the action of the striking mechanics will result disastrously to the interests of the trade and the people generally, while the employer will not be much harmed. To compel the employer in competition with a Hanufacturer operating under a low rate of wages to pay a greatly higher rate is to require him to surrender his business to his competitor. That appears to us to be the long and short of the matter, and, in that sepect of the case, we repeat the strike is a serious and grievous mistake. If there is any hope in arbitration it ought to be seized upon now. Without it we fear very much that the workers the scale to where she justly bewill be the chief sufferers, and that the State will be second in sustaining injury, while the employers will simply take their work else-

Ir looks as if the Democrats were trying to make a "silver record." They will filibuster on the Jones bill and force the Republicans into what they call a "hole" by trying to tack on an amendment providing for free coinage. We don't believe that such a measure would be oned by the President and don't believe the Democrats think it would, hence their anxiety to try the experiment. If the Jones bill becomes a law silver will go to par inside of ninety days, and what more do we want?

IDEAS ABOUT HEAVEN. rations and Faiths Concerning to Great Beyond.

Every body has heard of the poor old fellow, aged, bent double by labor and sickness, and with only a second-hand acquaintance with pleasure, who when asked his idea of heaven answered that asked his idea of heaven answered that it seemed to him a place where one might sit forever in an easy chair and be served with cake and wine by angels. Such a heaven seemed to his imagination—nurtured all his life on aches and pains and thoughts of the labors of the morrow—a veritable elysium; the antithesis of his somber experiences of life, and in consequence there was nothlife, and in consequence there was nothing irrelevant in his answer, but simply a description of what to him was a thought full of joy and comfort to his aching bones. Simple, however, as was the old man's answer, it was representative of the universal voice of man kind, and contained within it the germ of that faith which in all its ages has blossomed out into aspirations of the bliss and joy of the great "unknown," whose problem has never yet been

The early Christians, torn by wild beasts in the Roman arens, driven to secret worship in underground holes, persecuted, tormented and despised, persecuted, tormented and despised, pictured a gorgeous city with streets of gold and gates of pearl, through which they could pass with erect head and crowned with gold, bearing palms in their hands and decked in new robes, singing till their hymn should resound as the voice of many waters. This, according to a writer in the Brooklyn Standard-Union, was the Patmosian heaven, a scene of splendid felicity and pure beatification. What more entranc ing idea could there be of such a reward for those who are faithful unto death, and what more bright and sweet to the poor, quivering martyrs who, while writhing in flames and torture, could look smilingly up to the troop of "bright ones" who come to bear them away to such delights.

The Hebrew apocryphal literature de scribes an upper, or heavenly, and a lower, or earthly, paradise. Each is divided into seven dwellings, each of which is twelve times ten thousand miles in length and breadth. A column ascends from the lower to the upper heaven, by which the souls of the blessed mount to the higher after a temporary sojourn in the lower. The Talmud names as one of the glories of the upper paradise the society of Enoch, Elijah, Moses and Ezra, who walk in the light of the coming Messiah. At the last day all Israel's enemies are to be cast into Gehenna and the blessed gathered together in the higher para-

The Mohammedan heaven, as described in the Koran, is a place of the rarest delights, where the righteous re-cline on mossy couches in a fair garden, listening to entrancing strains and drinking of the rarest and pleasantest the abode of the heroes slain in battle, who live again in the scenes of their life, but amid eternal victories, chanting sagas and battle songs and quaffing mead from the skulls of their enemies.

Of an entirely different nature is the heaven of the Buddhist. It consists of beaven of the Buddhist. It consists of twenty-eight grades in a gradually ascending scale of happiness as follows: The not-fighting, the joyful, the change enjoying, the changing others—arbitrarily, the assembled Brahmas, the servants of Brahma, the great Brahmas, limited light, illimited lights, pure light, limited purity, illimited purity perfect purity, great merit, unconscious, the not great, the exempt from pain, the well-seeing, the beautiful, the highest, illimited space, illimited science, the place of naught, that of nothought and that of nothought and that of not-no-thought, this last being a sphere where all the activities of life are nil. Indeed, the final goal of Buddhism looks toward the destruction of sin by exhausting its existence, or by impeding its existence. Much akin to this are the Brahminical and Shinto heavens, as well as that of Much akin to this are the Brahminical and Shinto heavens, as well as that of the Parsees, which look toward final glorification in a state of ecstatic peace in company with Ahura-Mazzda, their supreme deity.

There is something pathetically simple in the distinctively opposite idea in which the red man's heaven is conceived. To him there is spread out the ceived. To him there is spread out the happy hunting grounds where, with his dog, his bow and arrows, he may follow dog, his bow and arrows, he may follow the deer over rustling prairies and the restraint he despises; all of which has been so happily described by Pope.

Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutored mind

"A dollar's worth for a dollar" is the motte of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other well-known vegetable remedies, and is pronounced by experts the strongest and best preparation of the kind yet produced. It owes its peculiar strength and medicinal merit to the fact that it is prepared by a Combination, Proportion, and Process

Peculiar to Itself, discovered by the proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and known to no other medicine. Its prompt action on the blood removes all impurities, and cures scrotals, and rheum; sores, bolls, pimples, all humors, and all diseases or affections arising from impure blood or low state of the system.

Catarrhai Deafocas—Hay Fever A New Home Treatment. Sufferers are not generally aware

New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks.

N.B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as in inrious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent on receipt of new treatment is sent on pay postage.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above.

was armed to kill whoever attempted to force an entrance.

It was then decided that a murder had been committed, and Chief of Police Tally, accompanied by Constable Hill and other officers were notified, visited the premises and discovered See Hoy sitting on the edge of his bed, and directly opposite in another bed hay the body of Lee Wah, with a frightful gash on his forehead, his nose broken and numerous bruises on his head, each one of which represented a fracture of the skull.

A search of the premises failed to reveal the instrument with which the murder was committed. See Hoy was placed under arrest and it was found that he had attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat, as there was a gash across it fully three inches in length. See Hoy offered no resistance to the arresting officers and younteered no explanation on his way to jail.

Chong Kee, the principal merchant in the Chinese quarter, says that Lee Wah and See Hoy have lodged together on the premises where the murder was committed for more than 20 years and they had always been like brothers, following the occupation of wood sawyers. They had frequent quarrels but never came to blows before and were constantly together.

Chong Kee says that the gash in See Hoy's throat was made about three days ago with the evident intent to commit suicide, and that he has lately exhibited signs of insanity. He thinks See Hoy committed the murder either with a piece of iron or a club.

The only bloody instrument found on the scene of the murder was a huge knife with a blade nearly a foot in length. An old hatchet also found in the apartment was covered with rust, but showed no blood stains. There was such a mass of old junk, cooking utensils and other rubbish in the apartment that it will take some time to make a thorough search of the premises.

ulation of Pitcairn Island, whose lonely and solitary home in the South Pacific Ocean is so far out of the path of travel that masters of vessels trading on the Pacific for years have never caught sight of their abode. It is rare, indeed, that a vessel is able to make the island, although very high out of water, owing to adverse and variable winds. No steam craft go that way.

Captain Barrett of the bark says that while beating down in the Pacific trade winds he was hailed by two bost-loads of men who wanted to give for anything that there might be on board. They were welcomed, and then said they were the descendants of the mutineers of the famous ship Bounty, whose master, Captain Bligh, was turned adrift while bringing tropical plants from Tahiti to the West Indies.

Captain Barrett insisted on seeing some of the young ladies, as those in some of the young ladies, as those in the boats were men, and they returned in a short time with Miss Young, Miss McCoy and Miss Christian, the leading belles of the island. The latter brought fowls, eggs and other presents, and were given articles of clothing, flour, etc., in return. Their mail was soon written and sent on board.

The islanders stated that their great lear was that their ocean home would become over populated.

become over populated.

It is three and a half miles long and a mile broad. Should births increas too rapidly the means of sustenance would be insufficient since old age is reached by most of the inhabitants. Nervous strain is not great among the island populace, and their years are thus drawn out. The mail which was turned over to Postmaster Field is des-tined for all parts of the world.

"A SOCIAL SESSION?"

The Comedy at McKissick's Oper

House Next Saturday. The Kansas City Journal says Music and humor held high carnival at the Ninth Street Theater last night. "A Social Session," by the Postage Stamp Company, made a hit with the audience from the overture by the orchestra until the curtain was rung down for the last time. There isn't much of any plot to "A Social Session," but music, good music, too, coupled with clever dancing and the finest orchestration, form a very pleas-ing's entertainment. The character of a Yankee Farmer, assumed by Mr. Hall, was an excellent portrayal, while Mr. Gibson as the "snap" actor was commendable. Mr. Gray, however, as Kyrle Bellak, was a whole show in himself and furnished the audience with constant amusement. Mr. Tal bot does not assume a very prominent part, but does what he has to do well and sings capitally. Mrs. Sprague was excellent as Helen Camp, while Miss Gertie Waddington won the audience as the old woman and by her splendid voice. Miss Blanche Haydon, the "Daisy," is as graceful as ever and dances very nicely. One great feature of the company is the orchestra. Their work comprises a series of musical specialties that are worth any one's while to hear.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

We sat at the club in the fire-light, As it flickered and played on the wall, And we chatted of music and Egypt, Of the opera, art and the ball.

And I talked half the night with the others, But my thoughts had flown far o'er the m And were dwelling in quiet seclusion In the halls of my castle—in Spain.

In the castle I builded so lofty, Which got a hard knock yesterday, When they told me Tom Jones is to marry Nell Murray—sweet Nellie—In May.

Why, Neil Murray has dwelt in that castle Ever since it's been mine, and it's plain That without her light footsteps and laughte: "Twill stand silent and lonely in Spain!

he used to walk, too, with some children In the gardens so sunny and wide; But to-night they have all of them vanished, And it seems as though some one had died

Well, Jones is a good-looking fellow I think, since my fancies are vain And he has run off with its mistress,

And I'll hang out a neat advertisement, Which somewhat as follows shall read: "For sale or to rent, ready furnished To meet every possible need, A mansion of fine, siry structure, With a wide and extensive domain." And I'll sell to the first man who offers To purchase my castle in Spain.

SAINT SOGORO.

True Tale of the Peasant Martyr of Soma, Japan.

In the first half of the seventeenth entury Kotsuke-no-Suke was the lord of Soma, a rich agricultural district containing one hundred and thirty-six villages. Kotsuke-no-Suke was a hard, grasping landlord, who oppressed his peasants by heavy taxes until they were reduced to the last extremity of poverty. Year after year the wretched farmers petitioned their lord, through the village mayors, to have their burdens lightened, but without avail. Being a member of the Shogun's Cabinet Kotsuke-no-Suke spent the greater part of the year in Yeddo, where he maintained a private palace and a host of retainers His extravagance gave rise to much comment in the capital, but few of the haughty nobles who frequented his entertainments knew by what means the Lord of Soma procured the vast sums of money necessary to support such lav-

In the fall of the year 1643 the farmers dwelling on the estate of Kotsukeno-Suke assembled together to devise measures for their relief. That year the taxes had been heavier than ever before, and scores of families were threatened with starvation during the coming winter. The stoutest hearted among them were filled with despair at the apparent hopelessness of their situ-ation. Sogoro, the mayor of one of the villages, and himself a farmer, had been, throughout all their vicissitudes, the stanch friend of the down-trodden peasants. He nowadvised them to draw up a petition to the Shogun's Cabinet, and then to select a committee to go up to Yeddo and present it to that body. When the evil doings of their Lord was known to his fellow-councilors their upbraidings and his own wounded pride might sname him into mercy. Sogoro's plan was adopted, and he was one of the number chosen to go to Yeddo to present the memorial to the Cabinet. Knowing the dangers that attended his mission

Sogoro, on the eve of his departure, called his family together and said:
"I am going to Yeddo, and it may be that I shall never return, for it is hard to say how I shall be treated by those in power. I am willing, however, to give my life for the good of our suffer-ing fellow-tenants. Let us, therefore, drink a cup of wine together, for it may be that you shall see my face no more. If I die, mourn not over my fate; weep

Sogoro and his companions went to Yeddo and there they soon learned of the riotous living of their spendthrift Lord, and they wept when they reflected that all his wanton luxury was bought with the life-blood of their famishing friends at Soma. In a few days the had an opportunity of presenting their petition to Lord Kuze, a member of the Cabinet, and they all felt elated that the great nobleman had condescended to listen to their grievances and to accept

The action of Kotsuke-no-Suke's tenants created no little stir in Yeddo, and many observations upon that nobleman many observations upon that notieman and his style of living were made that could scarcely be called complimentary. But it does not do for people living in glass houses to throw stones. All the members of the Shogun's Cabinet had at one time or another been guilty of oppressing their own peasants, and it would be extremely awkward for them now to sit in judgment upon Kotsukeno-Suke. So it was decided to return the petition to the complainants. Accordingly Sogoro received a summons to appear at the residence of Lord Kuze. There he was met by two councilors, who handed him the ill-starred memorial, saving: "A short time ago you had the audaci ty to thrust this petition into the hands of Lord Kuze. By his extraordinary clemency he forgives your offense, but beware that you do not again presume upon his Lordship's forbearance, for ill will it fare with you."

"His Lordship's censure is just," humbly responded Sogoro. "But oh! my Lords, this action of ours is not hasty or ill-considered. Year after year have we suffered untold hardships, until now we and our triends are without now we and our friends are without even the necessaries of life. Therefore have we presented this petition. I pray you, Lords, consider our case, vouchsafe to help us that we may live. Our gratitude to you shall know no bounds."

that their wrongs may be made known and happily righted. On the morrow, therefore, do you all, except six men, return to Soma and tell our poor friends to have stout hearts, for there is yet hope for them." goro had from the first been recognized as the leading spirit of the enter prise, and his companions now made haste to follow out his suggestions. The intrepid farmer and his six asso-clates drew up a new memorial, setting forth their grievances in a plain, straightforward manner and earnestly appealing for redress. Shortly after, while the Shogun, Iyemitsu, was on his way to Uyeno to worship at the tombs of his ancestors, Sogoro contrived to break through the troop of armed retainers that were escorting his Majesty, and thrust the petition into the hands of the Shogun. The daring farmer was seized and hurried off to prison. Iyemitsu was a just ruler and gave the peasants' memorial his careful attention. The result of it all was that Kotsuke-no-Suke was ordered to reduce his tenants' taxes to a proper amount, and to return to them the money he had wrongfully

The Lord of Soma was a very angry man, but though he might rage and vow vengeance upon the heads of his ten-ants, he had to obey the orders of his chief. And thus relief came at last to the long-suffering peasants.

But, alas for poor Sogoro! The irrevocable law of the nation pronounced his offense deserving of death, and he was turned over to his legal Lord for execution. In feudal Japan the nobility held the power of lite and death over their peasant-vassals, and now the cruel Kotsuke-no-Suke, thirsting for vengeance, determined to destroy the whole family of Sogoro. In vain his tenants, his Samurai, his councilors, and even the Princes of the surrounding country besought the lord of Soma to be merci ful; the bloody tyrant was inexorable. Sogoro and his wife were condemned to be crucified, and their three sons, aged seven, ten and thirteen respectively, were ordered to be beheaded in the presence of their parents.

On the day of the execution all the inhabitants of the one hundred and thirty-six villages of Soma assembled to bid Sogoro and his wife farewell and to encourage them with their presence and their prayers. There was not one there, even to the executioners themselves. that did not call down the blessings of Heaven upon the martyrs, while curses deep and bitter, were hurled against the hated Kotsuke-no-Suke. After the parents were made fast to the crosses the three boys were led forth and be headed in their sight. Friends received the bodies and bore them. away to prepare them for burial. O Man, Sogoro's wife, turning to her husband, said in a

"Remember, my husband, that from the first you had made up your mind to What though our bodies be disgracefully exposed on these crosses? we have the promises of the gods before us; therefore, mourn not. Let us fix our minds upon death; we are drawing near to Paradise, and shall soon be with the saints. Let us cheerfully lay down our lives for the good of our people."

"Well said, wife," responded Sogoro, gayly. "I am happy because I have atained my heart's desire. Our petition was successful: had I five hundred lives. and could I five hundred times assume this shape of mine, I would die five hundred times to redress the wrongs of our people."

Then the executioner taking his spear thrust it into the side of O Man and into the side of her husband, and both died there in the sight of the sorrowing peasants. And Kotsuke-no-Suke's chief councilor, when all was over, came and knelt down before the dead body of the farmer and said:

"Although you were but a peasant, you saved your brethren. You bruised your bones and crushed your heart for their sakes. Honors shall yet be paid to your spirit, and you shall be canonized as a saint; you shall become a tutelar deity among the people of Soma."
And so it came to pass. The farmers of Soma made the grave of Sogoro a place of prayer, and finally came to look upon him as divine. Finally a temple arose in his honor, and he at length duly canonized as a Buddhist saint.—W. C. Kitchin, Ph. D., in N. Y. Ledger.

The Road to Prosperity The man who saves something every year, quotes a contemporary, who had the remark from every quarter, is on the road to prosperity. It may not be possible to save much. If not, save a little. Do not think that a dollar or a dime is too small a sum to lay by. Every body knows how little expenditures get away with large sums. But few seem to know that the rule is one that works both ways. If a dime spent here and a dollar spent there soon make large hole in a man's income, so do dimes and dollars laid away soon become a visible and a respectable accumulation. In this country any man can make himself independent or keep himself under the harrow for life, according as he wastes or spends his small

A Cause of Much Profanity.

When a man runs a quarter of a mile to catch a train, and jumps on the plat-form of the last car, "allout of breath," as the locomotive steams out of the sta-tion, he feels as if he had won a great victory. But when the train stops be-fore it has proceeded fifty yards, backs into the station and waits half an hour for some unexplained cause, he's mad enough to blow up the whole business with dynamite. But he simply "blows up" the railroad company with his

to help us that we may live. Our gratitude to you shall know no bounds."

"Your request is a just one," replied the councilors, when they had heard the words of Sogoro, "but your memorial can not be received."

Disheartened beyond measure, Sogoro sought out his companions and acquainted them with the result of their efforts. It was a gloomy evening which the Soma men spent together, discussing with tearful voices the desperate extremity to which the failure of their plans had reduced themselves and their friends. At last Sogoro said:

"There is still one aft for us to do; we can appeal to our Lord's master, the Shogun. I know it is a capital oftense for a commoner to approach his Majesty, yet, for the sake of my suffering brethren, I shall sacrifice myself

ORIENTAL BED-CLOTHING.

How the Japanese and Chinese Sleep Their Native Land.

In the land of the Orient the tastes of people as regards sleeping accommodations are as widely different from the English and American as their daily life. In Japan the only bedding is made in the shape of a huge gown or overcoat, with sleeves, and each sleeve accommo dates a sleeper, who crawls into the aperture very much as a kitten would. Like their cousins, the Chinese, the Japs use no sheets, unless the lining of the "night overcoats" can be looked upon as sheets. Their pillows are miniature bureaus made out of either rattan or polished wood, filled with drawers to hold their jewelry and other valuables while they themselves are asleep.

There are no bedsteads in Japan. The same spotless floor that answers for table, chairs and dancing stage is utilized for sleeping purposes. In China there are bedsteads, and these, with the bed-clothing, form the most ornamental portion of the household furniture. It is as the piano and pillow-shams of a well-regulated American house. It is a common thing for a Chinese gentleman to spend $5,000 or even $10,000 cash for a beautifully carved and jeweled bedstead, and $1,000 or more for simple embroideries on the edges and corners of his favorite quilt.

These latter are very numerous and varied among those who are able to enjoy such luxuries. None of these coverlets are less than "three-ply" affairs; indeed, such is the superstition among the almond-eyed aristocracy that not one of them could be hired to sleep under a coverlet that is composed of only one or two thicknesses. The former indicates (to their mind) extreme poverty, while two is considered an even or unlucky number. Therefore all the Chinese bed-clothes are either padded or a thin sheet of paper is put in the center. Most all the quilts or beb-clothes of the rich are made of silks or satins, with highly colored em-broidery work on the exterior, and lined with strong white silk or fine linen, and are only washed about once a year. As in Japan, no sheet is used. The Chinese bed-making in the mornings consists of folding up every article of bed-clothes in long folds in such a manner as to expose all the beautiful needle-work, and then they are carefully piled one on top of the other upon a neat shelf built against the wall inside of the artistically hung bed curtains. Then the latter is carefully drawn apart to expose the rich rugs and opium layout upon the bed and the folded bed-clothes upon the shelves.

The poorer class of the Chinese have only one "pe," or padded quilt, thick enough to keep them warm the coldest nights in the winter, while in summer, like the rich, they use nothing save their own undergarments. In other words it is either a feast or a famine as far as sleeping comforts are concerned Unlike the rich, the poorer classes of Chinamen take off the linings of their "pes" about twice a year for cleansing purposes. If a bed in a first-class American hotel were given to a Chinese gentleman he would probably sit up all waiting for a place to lie down. Wong Chin Foo, in N. Y. Sun.

WHITE HOUSE DINNERS. What You Must Do in Case You Are Invited to One of Them.

The usual hour for a state dinner is eight o'clock p. m. As the guests arrive, which should be fifteen minutes before the hour set, they are shown to the rooms for the removal of wrappings and descend by the private stair way to the grand corridor and proceed direct to the East room where the President and lady await them. Each gentleman upon entering the room is handed by an usher a small envelope containing a card inscribed with plan of the table and bearing the name of the lady he will escort. On the diagram the number of the seats he and the lady will occupy are marked. After being received by the President he examnes the card and immediately joins the lady whom he will accompany to the state dining-hall. The lady whom he has brought remains with him until her escort appears. All his guests having arrived at the appointed hour the steward announces that dinner is in readiness. The President, with the first lady guest, leads the way to the state dining-room, followed by the remaining guests. The presid-ing lady, escorted by the principal man, closes the line. The Marine Band, meanwhile, performs a suitable march. In the dining-room the guests find their places and take the seats assigned to them by the plate cards, which correspond in location with the diagram handed them upon entering the East room.

There are four services at all state dinners. The dishes in their order are served on silver salvers by waiters, the guests helping themselves. The chief waiter serves the President first and then proceeds toward the right, and the second waiter toward the left. The same ourse is observed on the opposite side of the table, beginning with the presiding lady. No one is ever served twice. The plates of one course are removed as soon as each guest is finished and the plate for the next is put in its place.

At the close of the dinner, which lasts about three hours, it has been the custom of late years for the gentlemen to leave the table with the ladies and not return. The custom during the earlier administrations was for the ladies to have their coffee served in the drawing-room and for the gentlemen to return to drink a single glass of wine to the CURE health of the President. Gentlemen wishing to enjoy a cigar retire during the coffee to the corridor at the foot of the private stairway, but join the ladies when the presiding lady makes the mo-tion to retire. After one promenade through the suite of parlors the gentlemen surrender the ladies to the gentle-men with whom they came, and with their own ladies take leave of the President and his lady. They should receive their wrappings and leave the building quietly and promptly. The last of the guests should have retired within thirty minutes after leaving the table.—Wash-
